Elizabeth Knox is an attorney with a background in civil rights, employment law, education law, and corporate law. Prior to entering private practice, she served as in-house counsel, advising on contracts, government audits, and employment and labor issues. She also has experience defining and developing corporate policies and procedures tailored to a SaaS scaleup. After law school, Elizabeth completed a clerkship in the United States District Court for the District of New Mexico.

Elizabeth earned her J.D. from Harvard Law School in 2016, where she was a Harvard Law School Presidential Scholar for Public Interest and received the Justice John Paul Stevens Public Interest Fellowship and the James Vorenberg Equal Justice Summer Fellowship. During her time at Harvard, she was a Technical Editor for the Harvard Journal of Law and Gender, a team leader for the Harvard Law Entrepreneurship Project, a member of La Alianza, and a Research Assistant for two professors and the Harvard Law School Problem Solving Workshop. During law school, Elizabeth spent time interning at the U.S. Department of Justice, Civil Rights Division, a disability rights impact litigation firm, the Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights, and the US Attorney's Office for the Western District of Texas.

She also holds a B.A., magna cum laude, in Communications Studies from Southwestern University.

Elizabeth is the Founder of Access the Dream, a service that advised businesses on employee disability issues. She now counsels parents and students on accommodations and self-advocacy strategies on a pro bono basis.
